YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio (WKBN) – Gamers showed off what they could create in under 48 hours this weekend at YSU's McDonough Art Museum.

People came together to create a themed video game — working all day and night.

The Youngstown Game Developers even live streamed each team's finished prototype on its YouTube channel.

Sunday afternoon, they unveiled their results.

"Overall, the whole experience of being here for the weekend was really cool," said gamer Brian McCombs. "You meet a bunch of new people. Seeing the games they're working on and seeing how much I could actually produce in that amount of time was a lot of fun."
